Clean version here with one additional edit:

Members of the policy team in the Governor's Office met with the demonstrators this morning to hear their concerns. North Carolinians are deeply connected to the land, and environmental stewardship is critical to economic development. DEQ spent months asking the pipeline developers tough questions during the permit application process and will continue to hold the pipeline company accountable by insisting on clean water, effective sedimentation control and rigorous air quality protections along the path of construction.

Members of the policy team in the Governor's Office ~~staff~~ met with the demonstrators to hear their concerns. North Carolinians are deeply connected to the land, and environmental stewardship is critical to economic development. DEQ spent months asking the pipeline developers tough questions during the permit application process questions. They and will continue to hold the pipeline company accountable by insisting on clean water, effective sedimentation control and high standards for air quality along the path of the construction.
